Mickey Mouse Atop the Disney Store - 1996

The Times Square renaissance began in earnest in 1995 when the Walt Disney Company started its restoration of the New Amsterdam Theater on 42nd Street. In 1935, two years before the New Amsterdam was turned into a movie theater, Mickey starred in his first color picture, "The Band Concert," and nobody, least of all Walt Disney himself, would have believed that Mickey Mouse would become the unofficial Mayor of Times Square.

The Orpheum Dance Palace in Times Square - 1948

Businessmen and out-of-town visitors could enjoy female companionship and a bit of dancing for a dime back in the 30's and 40's at halls like the Orpheum Dance Palace. The women were known as "taxi dancers" because their fee of 10 cents a dance was similar to the charge on a taxi meter.
